Composting

- What makes good compost?
- What shouldn't you use?
- What types of bins should you use?
- How long does it take for your compost to mature?
- Does it smell or attract bugs?

What is compost?

Compost is rich in nutrients. It is beneficial for the land, used in gardens, landscaping, horticulture, and agriculture. According to Garden Coach Kate Donovan and Master Gardener Eric Bromberg from Blackstone Veggie Gardens, “Composting is a natural process of recycling organic materials such as leaves and vegetable scraps into a rich soil amendment that gardeners fondly nickname ‘Black Gold’ for your garden”!

Learn how to recycle all your kitchen scraps, leaves, and grass clippings and turn them into black gold!
